Course Philosophy

The United States is a free enterprise system that encourages, engages, and supports business and consumers within a framework of laws. These laws regulate many aspects of business activity such as: contracts, advertising, commerce, banking, credit, and employment. For students to be able to make informed decisions concerning credit use, employment options, and entering into contracts it is essential that the legal aspects and responsibilities relating to each topic is clearly understood.

As students enter into adulthood and interact with many businesses the actions of both parties will often be guided and tested by a set of laws. The comprehension of why these laws were written and how they are applied to business transactions is essential to becoming a productive individual in society.

Course Description

Honors Business and Contract Law is a course that provides an understanding of law and its effect and relationship to people and business. The course will explore the government's role in regulating and monitoring businesses engaged in: banking, retail sales, investment, manufacturing, internet sales, and service industries. Inevitably the use of a contract applies to most of these business activities. Students will gain an understanding of why and how contracts are used in business.

Student enhancement of the course content will include instructional strategies such as: case study analysis, role playing skits, student presentations, guest speakers, internet application, film viewing, and debates.

Suggestions on how to differentiate in this unit:

- Teachers may employ cooperative learning strategies (brainstorm the 10 most influential business inventions) to facilitate peer assistance to all students.
- Teachers may also provide ancillary materials (visuals of logos, trademarks, trade characters) and re-teaching opportunities (role playing skits) for kinesthetic students who require additional practice on the content, themes, concepts, and skills of this unit.
- Original logos, trademarks, and trade characters can be created to enhance understanding of the unit for artistic students.
